The Home of Age-Defying Organic Frankincense

Long revered around the world for its incredibly rejuvenating properties, frankincense is at the heart of our multi-award-winning Rejuvenating Frankincense skincare collection.

Every item in the collection is scientifically formulated with potent organic ingredients, to deliver visible results, enhancing your beauty while fighting the signs of ageing.

We use a blend of hand-harvested frankincense from Kenya and Somalia; each genus is carefully selected for both its regenerative properties and long-term sustainability.

Precious pearls of rejuvenating, toning and firming frankincense resin
Wild-growing frankincense trees in the arid desert of Somalia
Frankincense, Our Pearl of the Desert

Frankincense has a long, worldwide, illustrious history. The sweet aromatic smoke from the resin has been prized for more than 4,000 years by Arabian Kings, Pharaohs and Roman Emperors alike – their insatiable demand even created a two thousand mile trade route connecting Arabia with the Western world.

At one time, frankincense was worth more than its weight in gold, and was as important to the Arabian economy as oil is today.

Divine Smoke

In ancient times it was believed that frankincense created a pathway between the earthly and divine worlds, the fragrant white smoke from the smouldering resin carrying the prayers of the people to the gods.

This divine connection is the reason it appears in the Bible as one of the gifts given to the newborn infant Jesus.

“The smoke of incense reaches heaven as does no other smoke.”
Arab historian al-Tabari
Naturally Rejuvenating

Frankincense has been long revered for its toning, firming and rejuvenating properties on the skin. Ancient Egyptian hieroglyphs tell us that frankincense was mixed with honey in moisturising facemasks, to counter the drying effects of the sun, or combined with moringa oil and plant juices in treatments to banish wrinkles.

Scientific Research

Modern research has established that natural components of frankincense oil, triterpenes, have potent anti-inflammatory, antiseptic and astringent properties, reinforcing its benefits for cracked, inflamed or dry skin.

In aromatherapy, frankincense is used to promote a state of relaxation, helping to encourage slower and deeper breathing, which is beneficial for respiratory conditions such as asthma and bronchitis.
Organic Kenyan Frankincense

Boswellia neglecta

The resin from this genus of frankincense tree seeps naturally from the bark. The women are able to simply pick the resin from the trees, still taking care to avoid the long thorns and wildlife.

Commiphora confusa

With these trees, the women make a small cut in the bark, returning a week later to collect the resin. Trees that are 4-5 years old produce the best resin, while those near the villages, which have been chewed by goats, produce the most.

Nothing is wasted

Any dead pieces of bark are brought back to the village and burnt – the smoke purifies pots, which then keep the milk fresh for up to three days instead of the usual one day.

The frankincense is distilled in a reclaimed boiler, the spent frankincense resin is used to light the fire for future distillations and the water is recycled.
Changing Lives in Northern Kenya

Our precious age-defying pearls of the desert are gathered by the women of the Samburu Tribe, from trees that grow wild in Northern Kenya. Collecting the frankincense is a popular job for the women, who sometimes stay out for 2-3 days, singing and chatting together, enjoying time away from their everyday chores.

It’s not all fun though, the trees are armed with sharp thorns and the women need to keep watch for wild lions and elephants.

We’re proud to use the Samburu Tribe’s organic frankincense in our skincare, and happily pay a 10% bonus, which is used for whatever project the community decide is the most important.

“We really appreciate the community bonus on top of the collection fee. We use it to buy food, clothes and books for our children, and to pay for school fees – secondary school has to be paid for here in Kenya.”

World’s First FairWild Organic Frankincense

Pioneering is in our DNA. So we couldn’t be more proud to launch FairWild certified organic frankincense in our award-winning skincare.

The FairWild certification indicates the sustainable use of wild-collected ingredients, with a fair deal for all those involved throughout the supply chain.

“Meeting the women of the Samburu Tribe reinforces how important it is that we continue supporting these people and their communities.”

Somali Frankincense

Boswellia carterii

Our blend of age-defying frankincense also contains a wonderful frankincense oil from Somalia. Families who have tended the same trees for generations tap and hand-harvest the frankincense resin from beneath the bark of the wild-growing trees.

Our bath and body care range combines frankincense with warming, soothing and toning organic oils to soften and rejuvenate.
From the temples of ancient civilisations to today’s multi-billion pound fragrance industry, frankincense remains invaluable. Even the word ‘perfume’ comes from the latin ‘per fumum’, meaning through or by smoke.

With its warm balsamic, slightly lemony scent, frankincense makes an excellent base note and fixative for higher fragrance elements in perfumes.

It is estimated that frankincense is used in 13 per cent of today’s fine fragrances.
